SYDNEY SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

PATRON Her Excellency The Honourable Margaret Beazley AC KC

Founded in 1932 by the Australian Broadcasting Commission, the Sydney Symphony Orchestra has evolved into one of the world's finest orchestras as Sydney has become one of the world's great cities. Resident at the iconic Sydney Opera House, the Sydney Symphony Orchestra also performs in venues throughout Sydney and regional New South Wales, and international tours to Europe, Asia and the USA have earned the Orchestra worldwide recognition for artistic excellence.

The Orchestra's first chief conductor was Sir Eugene Goossens, appointed in 1947; he was followed by Nicolai Malko, Dean Dixon, Moshe Atzmon, Willem van Otterloo, Louis Fremaux, Sir Charles Mackerras, Zdenek Macal, Stuart Challender, Edo de Waart and Gianluigi Gelmetti. Vladimir Ashkenazy was Principal Conductor from 2009 to 2013, followed by David Robertson as Chief Conductor from 2014 to 2019. Australian-born Simone Young commenced her role as Chief Conductor in 2022, a year in which the Orchestra made its return to a renewed Sydney Opera House Concert Hall.

The Sydney Symphony Orchestra's concerts encompass masterpieces from the classical repertoire, music by some of the finest living composers, and collaborations with guest artists from all genres, reflecting the Orchestra's versatility and diverse appeal. Its award-winning education program is central to its commitment to the future of live symphonic music, and the Orchestra promotes the work of Australian composers through performances, recordings and its commissioning program.

ABOUT THE ARTISTS

MARK WIGGLESWORTH conductor

Mark Wigglesworth is recognised internationally for his masterly interpretations both in the opera house and in the concert hall, and for his highly detailed performances that combine a finely considered architectural structure with great sophistication and rare beauty. He is an outstanding conductor who has forged many enduring relationships with orchestra and opera companies across the world, conducting repertoire ranging from Mozart through to Boulez.

Wigglesworth has enjoyed a long relationship with English National Opera (Lady Macbeth of Mtsensk, Così fan tutte, Falstaff, Káťa Kabanová, Parsifal, Force of Destiny, Magic Flute, Jenůfa, Don Giovanni, Lulu), and operatic engagements elsewhere include The Royal Opera House, Covent Garden (Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg, Rise and Fall of Mahagonny, La Clemenza di Tito), The Metropolitan Opera, New York (The Marriage of Figaro) as well as at The Bavarian State Opera, Opéra national de Paris, Semperoper Dresden, Teatro Real, The Netherlands Opera, La Monnaie, Welsh National Opera, Glyndebourne, and Opera Australia. In 2017 he received the Oliver Award for Outstanding Achievement in Opera.

On the concert platform, highlights include performances with the Berlin Philharmonic, Royal Concertgebouw, London Symphony, London Philharmonic, Boston Symphony, New York Philharmonic, Philadelphia Orchestra, Chicago Symphony, Los Angeles Philharmonic, Cleveland Orchestra, Tokyo Symphony and the Sydney Symphony. His recordings include a critically acclaimed complete cycle of the Shostakovich symphonies with the BBC National Orchestra of Wales and the Netherlands Radio Philharmonic, Mahler's Sixth and Tenth symphonies with the Melbourne Symphony, a disc of English music with the Sydney Symphony, Britten's Peter Grimes with Glyndebourne, and the Brahms Piano Concertos with Stephen Hough.

He has written articles for The Guardian and The Independent, made a six-part TV series for the BBC entitled Everything to Play For, and held positions as Associate Conductor of the BBC Symphony, Principal Guest Conductor of the Swedish Radio Symphony, the Adelaide Symphony, Music Director of the BBC National Orchestra of Wales, and Music Director of English National Opera. His book The Silent Musician: Why Conducting Matters was published in October 2018 by Faber & Faber.

ABOUT THE ARTISTS

EMILY SUN violin

Violinist Emily Sun is in demand internationally for her compelling and captivating interpretations.

Her genuine connection with audiences and engaging presence have thrilled her growing audiences, as she performs as a concerto soloist with leading orchestras, as a chamber musician and recitalist in major concert halls around the globe.

Emily is the 2023 Artist-in-Association with the Adelaide Symphony Orchestra, with several concerto appearances during the season including the world premiere of Elena Kats-Chernin's Violin Concerto. She returns for concertos with the Melbourne and Sydney Symphony Orchestra, collaborating with conductors such as Jaime Martín and Mark Wigglesworth. Her recent debut with the West Australian Symphony Orchestra and Vasily Petrenko was highly acclaimed.

Emily's recent solo album, Nocturnes, was released on ABC Classics/Universal to critical acclaim; it stayed at No.1 in the ARIA Classical Charts for four weeks and was shortlisted for 'Best Classical Album 2021' in the ARIA Awards.

As a concerto soloist, Emily has appeared with orchestras including the Sydney, Melbourne, Tasmanian, Queensland and Canberra Symphony Orchestras in Australia; the European Union Chamber Orchestra, Orchestre de Royal Wallonie and Orchestre de Chambre Namur in Europe; Arlington and Arizona Symphonies in the USA; and Shanghai Youth Orchestra and Qingdao Symphony Orchestra in China. She has performed as soloist at the Sydney Opera House, Wigmore Hall, Royal Albert Hall, Bridgewater Hall Manchester, Tchaikovsky Great Hall Moscow, Auditorium du Louvre Paris, and Flagey Brussels.

As a teen, Emily shot to national fame after being featured in the acclaimed award-winning Australian documentary Mrs Carey's Concert. Emily studied with Dr Robin Wilson (Sydney Conservatorium of Music), Itzhak Rashkovsky (Royal College of Music, London), Augustin Dumay (Chapelle Musicale Reine Elisabeth, Belgium) and received further mentoring from Pinchas Zukerman, Maxim Vengerov and Ivry Gitlis.

Awards and prizes have included the Tagore Gold Medal from the Royal College of Music, the 2018 ABC Young Performers Award (Australia), the 2016 Royal Overseas League Music Competition (UK), and the Brahms (Austria), Yampolsky (Russia) and Lipizer (Italy) international violin competitions. She was a Young Concert Artist for the Tillett Trust, The Worshipful Company of Musicians and City Music Foundation.

Emily is a Violin Professor at the Royal College of Music, and has been a jury member of several international violin competitions.

Emily plays a fine 1760 Nicolò Gagliano violin, kindly loaned to her through the Beare's International Violin Society.

ABOUT THE MUSIC

MAX BRUCH (1838–1920)

Violin Concerto No.1, Op.26 (1866)

Max Bruch's First Violin Concerto is one of the greatest success stories in the history of music. The violinist Joseph Joachim, who gave the first performance of the definitive version in 1868 and had a strong advisory role in its creation, compared it with the other famous 19th-century German violin concertos: those of Beethoven, Mendelssohn and Brahms.

Bruch's, said Joachim, is 'the richest, the most seductive'. (Joachim was closely associated as performer with all four of these concertos, and with the creation of Brahms' concerto, which he premiered in 1879.) Soon Bruch was able to report that his concerto 'is beginning a fabulous career.' In addition to Joachim, the most famous violinists of the day took it into their repertoire: Leopold Auer, Ferdinand David, Pablo de Sarasate. With his first important large-scale orchestral work, the 30-year-old Bruch had a winner.

The success of this concerto was to be a mixed blessing for Bruch. Few composers so long-lived and prolific are so nearly forgotten except for a single work. (Kol nidrei for cello and orchestra is Bruch's only other frequently performed piece, its use of Jewish melodies having erroneously led many to assume that Bruch himself was Jewish.) Bruch followed up this violin concerto with two more, and another six pieces for violin and orchestra. But although he constantly encouraged violinists to play his other concertos, he had to concede that none of them matched his first. This must have been especially frustrating considering that Bruch had sold full rights in it to a publisher for the paltry sum of 250 thalers.

In 1911 an American friend, Arthur Abell, asked Bruch why he, a pianist, had taken such an interest in the violin. He replied, 'Because the violin can sing a melody better than the piano can, and melody is the soul of music.' It was the composer's association with Johann Naret-Koning, concertmaster of the Mainz orchestra, which first set Bruch on the path of composing for the violin. He did not feel sure of himself, regarding it as 'very audacious' to write a violin concerto, and reported that between 1864 and 1868 'I rewrote my concerto at least half a dozen times, and conferred with x violinists.' The most important of these was Joachim. Many years later Bruch had reservations about the publication of his correspondence with Joachim about the concerto, worrying that 'the public would virtually believe when it read all this that Joachim composed the concerto, and not I.'

ABOUT THE MUSIC

Violinist Joseph Joachim

As we have seen, Joachim thought Bruch was on the right track from the first. Bruch was lucky to have the advice of so serious an artist, a composer himself, well aware of how the 'concerto problem' presented itself 20 years after Mendelssohn's E minor Violin Concerto. Like Mendelssohn, Bruch had brought the solo violin in right from the start, after a drum roll and a motto-like figure for the winds. The alternation of solo and orchestral flourishes suggests to Michael Steinberg a dreamy variant of the opening of Beethoven's Fifth Piano Concerto.

With the main theme launched by the solo violin in sonorous double-stopping, and a contrasting descending second subject, a conventional opening movement in sonata form seems to be under way. The rhythmic figure heard in the plucked bass strings plays an important part.

ABOUT THE MUSIC

But at the point where the recapitulation would begin, Bruch, having brought back the opening chords and flourishes, uses them instead to prepare a soft subsiding into the slow movement, which begins without a pause. Bruch first called the first movement Introduzione-Fantasia, then Vorspiel (Prelude), and asked Joachim rather anxiously whether he shouldn't call the whole work a Fantasy rather than a Concerto. 'The designation "concerto" is completely apt,' replied Joachim. 'Indeed, the second and third movements are too fully developed for a Fantasy. The separate sections of the work cohere in a lovely relationship, and yet – and this is the most important thing – there is sufficient contrast.'

The songful character of the violin is to the fore in Bruch's Adagio. Two beautiful themes are linked by a memorable transitional idea featuring a rising scale. The themes are artfully and movingly developed and combined, until the second 'enters grandly below and so carries us out in the full tide of its recapitulation' (Tovey).

Although the second movement comes to a quiet full close, the third begins in the same warm key of E flat major, with a crescendo modulating to the G major of the Finale, another indication of the tendency of Romantic composers like Bruch to think of a concerto as a continuously unfolding and linked whole. The Hungarian or Gypsy dance flavour of the last movement's lively first theme must be a tribute to the native land of Joachim, who had composed a 'Hungarian' Concerto for violin. Bruch's theme was surely in Brahms' mind at the same place in the concerto he composed for Joachim. Bruch's writing for the solo violin, grateful yet never gratuitous throughout the concerto, here scales new heights of virtuosity. Of the bold and grand second subject, Tovey observes that Max Bruch's work 'shows one of its noblest features just where some of its most formidable rivals become vulgar.' In this concerto for once Bruch was emotional enough to balance his admirable skill and tastefulness. The G minor Violin Concerto is just right, and its success shows no sign of wearing out.

ABOUT THE MUSIC

LUDWIG VAN BEETHOVEN (1770–1827) Symphony No.7, Op.92 (1812)

Beethoven's Seventh Symphony was completed in April 1812 and given its first performances in December 1813. One, a large charity concert in aid of Bavarian and Austrian soldiers, drew an audience of 5,000 people. Performances to large audiences also took place at the Vienna Musikverein, though Beethoven himself complained that the orchestra there was too large for this music. The composer felt that a too-large band was incapable of dealing with the subtle shadings of tempo and colour that he wrote, and stated that he preferred an orchestra of only sixty players. Unfortunately, the first audiences for the Seventh Symphony heard it in tandem with Wellington's Victory (a truly hideous piece of work – complete with a reference to 'For he's a jolly good fellow' to celebrate Wellington's defeat of Napoleon). As a result the audiences inferred certain militaristic and nationalistic messages from the music which are far removed from what Beethoven intended, and more importantly, from what the piece implies in itself.

This symphony has always provoked attempts to interpret it in visual terms. Maynard Solomon's biography lists some of the more inspired: 'a peasant dance'; 'a village wedding'; 'a Knight's Festival'; 'the upsurge of a powerful dionysiac impulse, a divine intoxication of the spirit'. Solomon goes on to point out that while these interpretations are all somewhat quaint there is a striking unanimity of imagery of large numbers of people having a festive time. Wagner famously described the symphony as the 'apotheosis of the dance', a reference to the way in which it deifies rhythm, but the references to dance also link the piece back to the Baroque suite. Solomon, moreover, has also pointed out in a recent essay that the rhythms of the work may be derived from the metres of ancient Greek poetry. He argues that here 'a fully-realised neo-Antique style came into being – muscular, powerful, restless, imbued with unstoppable energy, saturated with ritual and ecstatic implications'.

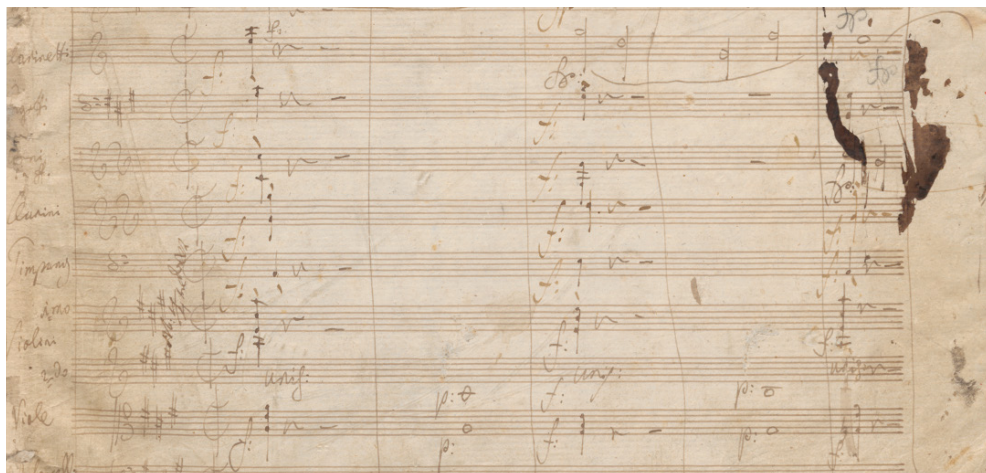

Beethoven in 1823

ABOUT THE MUSIC

Strangely enough, the Seventh Symphony puzzled some listeners, especially those who expected to hear the characteristic struggle and triumph of Beethoven's 'heroic' or middle period works. But Beethoven, in his music if not his life, successfully fought Fate to a standstill in the symphonic works beginning with the Eroica; in his Pastoral Symphony the Storm movement is the last gasp of that oppressive figure. In a work like the Seventh Symphony there is no adversarial program. In 1827 a reviewer of the work asked, 'what had become of the good man in his later period? Had he not succumbed to a kind of insanity?' Another complained that 'the whole thing lasts at least three quarters of an hour and is a true mixture of tragic, comic, serious and trivial ideas, which spring from one level to another without any connection, repeat themselves to excess, and are almost wrecked by the immoderate noise of the timpani'. And Beethoven's first biographer, the never entirely reliable Anton Schindler, said that the composer Weber had suggested that Beethoven was 'ripe for the madhouse' on the basis of this work.

The piece is, as we might expect, the work of a supremely gifted craftsman as well as a work of genius. The slow introduction acts as a reservoir for much of the material in all four movements. The key feature of this whole symphony is rhythm, and the slow introduction sets up and plays with the relationship between rhythmic phases, the descending chords on the winds as against the rising semiquaver scales of the strings. The transition into the buoyant first movement – via a chirruping woodwind motif – is ingenious. It is also an example of how, as so often, Beethoven is able to seemingly withdraw into silence, so much so that he has established the new fast tempo before we even realise it.

ABOUT THE MUSIC

Beethoven's handwritten manuscript for his Seventh Symphony
via Wikimedia Commons

What passes for the slow movement – allegretto is hardly a slow tempo – is not, of course, Beethoven's first 'funeral march' but this one differs from that of the Eroica in both its emotional restraint and the relative optimism of its middle section. Death, it seems, is no longer tragic. The scherzo and trio are inevitably upbeat in tone. The trio section's theme is said to refer to an Austrian pilgrims' song, more evidence of the sense of collective experience that the work presents. In the last movement, Beethoven's rhythmic manipulation is comparable to that of the Stravinsky of Agon or the Symphonies of Wind Instruments: a rhythmic motive – compared by William Kinderman to a coiled spring – is passed from one voice to another and at one point is accompanied by an augmented – that is mathematically expanded version of itself. In numerous such ways the Seventh shows how the intense concentration Beethoven learned in the Eroica and the Fifth Symphonies can be merged with the lyrical joy of his Fourth and Sixth symphonies.

MUSICIAN PROFILE

Alexandra Mitchell

Violin

How long have you been playing with the Sydney Symphony?

Nearly 23 years.

What has been the highlight of your Sydney Symphony career so far?

Working with conductors Jaap van Zweden and Charles Dutoit.

Who is your favourite composer to perform, and who is your favourite composer to listen to?

There are too many to choose from! But I love Brahms, Schubert or Shostakovich (for both questions) because of the range of emotions they convey and the storytelling in their music.

When did you realise that you could make a career out of music?

When I won my job with the Sydney Symphony I finally felt like I was involved in something that both challenged me and excited me enough to stick at it. Playing a different program every week proved to me that variety really is the spice of life!

What is the best piece of advice you ever received?

That's really hard to narrow it down to just one. What's been helpful to me most recently is noticing my thoughts and speaking with more compassion to myself, along with bringing my focus back to my breathing if I'm feeling a bit nervous on stage.

If you weren't a musician, what would you most like to be?

I like psychology, so that could be a path I'd investigate. Or working with animals in some capacity – maybe animal psychology!

THANK YOU

FLY BETTER

In the future, more airlines will have soft luxurious leather seats, raised footrests and more room to stretch out. They might even have delicious gourmet meals and thousands of entertainment channels. Meanwhile at Emirates, you can fly today. Introducing the new Premium Economy cabin on selected routes.
